SHORE ASSOCIATION PARENT SEMINAR:

“You can lead a horse to water.....’ Supporting and Understanding Procrastination in High School.”

The Shore Association invites parents to attend an informative seminar on procrastination by Shore school’s psychologist, Joelle Kinsella.

One of the most common complaints that parents have about their High School aged children is that they leave their schoolwork to the very last minute, and then there is a mad rush in the days and even hours before the work is due. This workshop will give an overview of the different psychological processes that make sense of why students procrastinate and provide parents with practical strategies about how to manage their procrastinating sons.

Joelle Kinsella joined the counselling team at Shore in 2016. She has previously worked at Waverley College and St Kevin’s College in Melbourne among other schools and worked for two years in London for Sutton Educational Psychology Service. She holds a Master’s Degree in Educational and Developmental Psychology. She has a particular interest in procrastination having faced her own battles in school and university. She is keen to help parents retain as much hair as possible throughout the high school years and to help boys tackle it to avoid wasting hours of their lives in favour of faffing about the house and getting caught in the vortex of endless YouTube videos.
