NEVER before in School history have we so welcomed the coming of the Christmas holidays; not because the year's work is over, not because, having honourably finished that work, we rejoice in a change and a rest before facing next year and its burdens, but that we may arrive at this vacation, the Christmas vacation, with lives made lighter because that Peace on earth, which typifies the season, is at hand—indeed has, practically speaking, already come. The weary waiting is over and the war well won. Now for Peace and Goodwill; a richer recognition of one another's aims and aspirations; a wiser use of our knowledge for the realization of our ideals; for the development of humanity.

In the School character is moulded, and we are justly proud of the part our Old Boys have played in bringing about the victory of Right over Might—that consummation so devoutly to be wished. Bearers of the Torch of Life they were in very truth: not fighting for the mere sake of adventure, much less for material gain. Fearlessly they went forth, carrying the torch into dark places, so that the whole world might become more radiant. For those who fought and are coming back—a thousand welcomes, a thousand good wishes. Yet ten thousand more deep thoughts, ay, thoughts too deep for words or tears, for those who come not back, but, nevertheless, unseen, are with us still—soldiers of the Deathless Army. And such thoughts are ours, also, for those left proudly sorrowing. But here, silence alone is eloquent.

And now, wishing all a peaceful Christmas and a bright New Year, we introduce the final number of The Torch-Bearer for 1918 to our readers.

We regret to lose from the staff at the end of the term Mr. Wilshire, who is joining the staff of the Sydney Grammar School next year.

Open Sunday this term fell on November 17th, and the preacher was Rev. Stacy Waddy, late Headmaster of the King's School.

We were sorry to lose Mr. Waldock, who left the staff at the end of last term to join the staff of the Royal Australian Naval College, Jervis Bay. We wish him every success in his new work.

We congratulate Sydney Grammar School on winning both the first and second rifle competitions.

During this term many boys have been out at Northbridge, and much good work has been done in preparing the new sports ground.

Next term begins on January 28th at 2 o'clock. New boys should present themselves on Monday, the 27th, at 9.30 a.m.

Old Boys serving with His Majesty's Forces.

Part of letter written in France by Vernon H. Treatt, dated 11/7/18:

It is our practice when, after a change over, we are stationed at the waggon lines, to spend a certain amount of our time and money in the nearest village. There is a surprising number of temporarily enthusiastic students of French amongst us. The interim between burning eagerness to seize the first French citizen and force him into conversation and the final cold apathy when anything in the nature of French language is discussed, is filled in the following manner: Usually in a sudden burst of keenness the seeker for linguistic fame will decide to air his knowledge of French in the very home and on the very hearths of the French people. There can be no better way, he argues, of learning the language and customs of the Romans than at Rome itself. This is not a quotation, and the meaning or analogy is a bit obscure, but it satisfies the soldier. With a few similarly enthusiastic cobbles he makes his way to the village—his head full of recently recalled

French phrases. Perhaps he'll air them on the way down. "On vous trappe!" he shouts as he gives his "cobber" a hefty clout on the ribs. If his cobber is a man of quick wit, with dazzling brilliant repartee he will answer, "et moi je vous frappe," and will return the blow with interest. Both are thereby enlivened, and interest in the amazing language wanes.

Crossing the little bridge which spans the swift stream, which in turn operates the old-fashioned mill, the soldiers walk up the fairly narrow main street. They pass the "mairie," the centre of village social and political life before the war, the usual church, with its high tower and spire—the more opulent (?) houses, now occupied by soldiers, until, in a side lane, they see a dwelling with the sign "eggs," over the front door. This will do. But the worst has to be faced, and overcome, before the goal is reached. The back yard is the first check on their high spirits. In the centre thereof there generally lies a heap of moist manure, where tows root and scratch, liberating distinctly unsavory odours. In the barn hardby the cow contentedly chews its cud, whilst Madame crouching over a none too bright bucket, quickly milks it. Perhaps mother has already done her work, and we lose an opportunity of studying the most modern and sanitary methods of conducting a dairy—methods calculated to send an inspector raving mad. If this is so we approach the door of the dingy two-roomed domicile and knock.

A shuffling, and madame opens.—"Bonjour." Madame responds; so far so good. "Voulez vous nous donner des oeufs." (That's how one writes it but Madame cannot "compris.") Perhaps we are a bit rusty. Madame mutters a few words at an absurdly fast rate. "Parlez plus lentement," you reply. Madame evidently thinks you're making some remark about the weather, for your last remark sets her going for about a minute. You repeat your first question with reference to the eggs, mentally noting that they'll be stale at this rate by the time you get them. At last your cobber, who has been steadily losing faith in your efficiency as a linguist, asks when you're going to get the eggs.

Madame hears the word "eggs"—a look of comprehension illuminates her wrinkled face; "You wish eggs?" four sous (holding up one); how many?" Despair, disgust, disillusionment and disgrace for you; but Madame has not been selling eggs for nearly four years. To Tommie for nothing! This is, however, insult to injury. Not content with refusing to understand our French, she as much as calls us "asses," by speaking in English to us, who would speak in French to her.

Enthusiasm is now somewhere below zero, while disgust and disinterests are vying with each other in an attempt to break the top of the thermometer. You pay for the eggs, and, with a "Bonjour," Madame,—here at least on safe ground—you depart.

Madame's French "laisse beaucoup à désirer," you make the perilous crossing of the yard, get out upon the road, and make for your tent and fried "oeufs."

We were not so absolutely ignorant. The peasantry here speak a distinct Patois and it is vastly different to Parisian French. I did have the differences (with examples) in pronunciation explained to me by an intelligent little French boy of ten years of age. They (the examples) were quite convincing. There are no isolated farms about this Department as in Blighty. There are numerous villages wherein farmers congregate and whence they go every day to till their fields, and generally cultivate the soil. These peasants are wonderfully conservative, and can tell you to a remarkable degree about modern European history, in so far as it affects France. They are bitter irreconcilable enemies of the Germans, and still, and will in my opinion, always cherish a fierce hatred and desire for revenge. One cannot blame them, when one thinks what they have gone through. They have an intense love for La Patrie, a love which seems to me to have become a sort of fetish. All primary school-books (and I've come across a fair number of them) exhort the children to honour their parents, cultivate the fields, and, above all, live or die gladly and willingly for La Patrie. "Mourir pour La Patrie," is considered the noblest of deaths. I believe even to-day many of the people cherish the memories of the Revolution and the two Empires. It has all amazed me. My address is 16th Battery, Aus. Field Artillery, A.I.F., Abroad.

Ted Woodward (Captain A.M.C.) sends the following particulars of the death of J. S. Wilson, Capt. A.M.C.: Poor old Jack Wilson was hit—a direct hit—with a shell quite close to me. A man he was talking to was hit in the feet, but he crawled to me and told me. I had Jack brought in and dressed his wounds roughly, and stopped the bleeding, and put him straight on to a car that managed to come up, and pushed him off, to give him what faint chance he had, but I heard a few hours later that he was dead. He was just conscious at my place, smiled and said good-bye; said he had no pain, and when a Major from his Ambulance came along, recognised him, and managed to murmur the map location of the Battalion he had been sent to establish communication with. His job done then, he became unconscious, and I doubt if he would speak again. When everything was very dim to him, this very necessary information, and the need to pass it on, was quite clear; and with the imparting of it his last worry was gone. He had previously given some other message to the Major which I could not catch as I was at the other end of the stretcher. It might be of some slight ease to his people to know that friends went to his aid at once, and that everything possible was done. In my job, I have seen, more's the pity, many brave men dying, but never a clearer case of devotion to duty to the very end, or a greater degree of quiet satisfaction.

Lieut. Ian Brassey, M.C., originally of A Battery, 119th Brigade, has applied for transfer to Aerial Service, and his permanent address is "Farmwood," Ascot, Berks., England.

G. Tait writes that he is in hospital at Cairo, suffering from malaria and he will have to take a Base job. Of the Jordan Valley, where he got malaria, he says: that the temperature in summer averages about 130 to 135 degrees in the shade, but of course the air is very dry.

Gunner J. V. L. Moore, enlisted in 1916, when he was a member of the clerical staff of the Sydney Morning Herald. He died of wounds on 28th September in France.

Frederick Rothe has succeeded in getting his appointment in the Australian Flying Corps in England. Writing on September 9th he said that he was first going to the Oxford school and afterwards to Tetbury.

Leonard Shields wrote from France on August 2nd: "No doubt you have had news of Mr. Abernethy's death, who was a Lieutenant in this battery. He was walking down our waggon lines when a German aeroplane dropped a bomb quite close to him, a fragment of which penetrated his heart, causing almost instant death. We all regret his death very much; he was a good officer and liked by everyone. He is buried in the Freschincourt churchyard, which is midway between Albert and Amiens. I have met a number of old boys lately: Dixon, Howell, Heron, Withy, Cattlin, and of course Meares, Pike, Watkins, H. Braddon, and Jones, who are in this battery. Tinsdale, an old Shore boy, and a member of this battery, was killed about a month ago. I have greatly enjoyed the account of the race in the Referee, which you sent me."

THE TORCH-BEARER.

Firth Fraser wrote from Barrow-in-Furness, September 3rd, "I rather wanted to be out in France before I wrote to you again. A fellow in this country doesn't generally feel very proud of himself in these days, but alas our departure for that blessed land has been postponed many times. However, I think I can honestly say that a few weeks ought to see me once again helping to strafe the Hun. I saw Guy Pulling just before he went off to India, looking very fit and well, vastly different from what he looked like previous to his return to Australia. I have been very fortunate in spending the last fortnight with my brother over on leave from France. In Edinburgh I met Woods, of the A.F.A., intent on tripping round the Highlands; he left school about '12 or '13. Max Tyler is carrying on very well and almost enjoying the war. Certainly the feeling that we are driving the Boche back has made everyone as keen as mustard. D. B. Carver, 6th Army Brigade, A.F.A., says there are quite a number of old boys in the Brigade batteries. He found himself extremely popular on one occasion as the sole possessor of the latest Torch-Bearer. S. W. Crane writes to me of the large number of Old Boys in the Forces, well over 800; wonderful, I think, considering the comparatively short time we have been among the large schools. The total of more than 100 killed is a sad set off, but the school will only lift its head the higher on that account."

A Clunies Ross, at Fovant, wrote on September 1st: "I am now in a comfortable position in England, gas sergeant on the staff of the second training brigade. I was sent here from the convalescent camp down the road towards Salisbury, feeling a bit uncomfortable at being so far away from the guns, but a Board on Friday last reported me still unfit for general service. Fallick went back to France about May. On furlough in Edinburgh I met Caldwell; both he and Fallick are in the 9th (Dixon's) Brigade. I have also met R. M. Allport and Kirkland. Rosewarne has just been attached here as a motor driver. I saw Jack Massie's name in orders as due to return to France. You will, of course, have had details of Jack Pockley's death; his brigade, the 9th, suffered very heavily in filling the gap left by the horrible breakdown; they earned a reputation which spread far through France in a very short time, but they paid the price. Australian discipline stood the supreme test in a fashion that no other can claim to have surpassed. I often wonder if the men who do these things (I can speak impersonally, as my stay in France was such that I reached there just too late for our autumn offensive, and left just too soon for the German March offensive) realise what they are standing for; there must be some tremendous motive behind it, but it is very seldom expressed. Is it a mere blind determination to show their own individual manhood, or is there some such feeling as the desire to rid the world of an ugly blot, and build a new one clean? The second German push swept over the whole of the country in which I had been living for most of the time. I was in France; our laboriously erected wire didn't seem to delay them at all. Putting up a barbed wire fence on a dark, cold night in No Man's Land, with rain or snow to add to the general joy of the experience is something I am glad to have been through. Snow is rather an advantage than otherwise, as one can see the posts and wire against it, whereas when it is not there the only way of finding them is to grope round and fall over them, or to get down with head near the ground and trace them against the somewhat less dark sky. Occasionally Fritz lent a hand with a flare. Fritz is on the move against his will, and there is a big chance, so say several people who are on the spot, and ought to know, that he will only stop when we decide to let him, and not when we have to."

Reg. George Preston has been wounded and is in London. A short time ago he received promotion to the rank of Major, and was awarded the M.C. He is serving with the Imperial Forces and is in charge of a machine gun section.

R. R. Brown (Reg.) died of injuries received in action at the 45th Casualty Clearing Station, on October 31, 1918.

Roger Nickoll has got his "wings," and when he wrote he said he was soon going over to France.

D. McCall McCowan had heavy fighting in Palestine in June, and afterwards contracted malaria. He was sent down to Alexandria, and left there to rejoin at Kantara on August 1st.

Cyril Regg, after several attempts, has succeeded in re-enlisting, and is now on his way home to rejoin his old regiment, the 12th A.L.H.

W. A. Elliott writes from H.M. Submarine "C 15", c.o. G.P.O., London, on Sept. 13, 1918, in answer to one of the boys' letters: "I think the scheme of you chaps writing to us is a very good one, as one always like to hear of the Old School at any time. I'll try and give you a short account of my doings since the war started. I left school at Christmas, 1913, and went to sea in the White Star Training ship Mersey, and I was still on leave from her (in England), when the war broke out. I at once applied to join the R.N.R., and joined my first ship, H.M.S. Duncan, on 28th August. I did six months in her with the Grand Fleet, and was then transferred to the H.M.S. Africa, another battleship in the Grand Fleet. We remained up north with the G.F. until early in May, 1916, when we were sent south in order to stop the German battle cruiser raids, and this just put us out of Jutland. Naturally, I was very disappointed at missing the fun, after having waited for the Huns up north for 22 months. In the meantime I had been recommended and transferred to the R.N., and in July, 1916, was promoted to Act.-Sub.-Lieut. (equal to 2nd Lieutenant, Army), and was promptly moved to H.M.S. Patrol, a light cruiser, where I served for four and a half months. My next ship was a destroyer, H.M.S. Ribble, and I remained in her until November, 1917, when I was recalled home to England (we had been out East in the Mediterranean), and I then volunteered and was accepted for the submarine service, and here I am.

I am afraid I am not allowed to say what I have seen, etc., as the Naval censorship regulations are very strict, and being the censor I have to be careful. I like the submarine work very much, and for one who wants an exciting life, without too much deadly monotony, I can thoroughly recommend it, although one has to rough it very much. However, the leave and pay is good, to make up for the additional danger incurred, and leave is a highly prized growth, after four years and a bit of active service, I can tell you. You might please tell the Editor of the Torch-Bearer that last year (Oct., I think), my brother, Lieut. A. C. Elliott, was awarded the Military Cross and also that I have been awarded "The Order of the Sacred Treasure," (Japanese), and was mentioned in despatches for work in June, 1917, and that now I have been promoted to Lieut. Royal Navy. The Japanese order was for being 1st Lieut. of the Ribble when we—how can I put it?—rendered a service to a Japanese destroyer in the Mediterranean. We also, eleven days later, rescued 800 troops off a torpedoed transport without the loss of a single soldier. Hence the mention. My young brother (G.A.) is now a 2nd Lieut. in the R.A.F.; he was a Probationary Flight Officer, R.N.A.S., but of course was transferred to the R.A.F. later on.

Writing from Wendoon, Bucks., on September 27, W. (Bill) Owen, says: I've been pretty busy since I came out of hospital. I'm trying to get transferred to the Australian Flying Corps, as a pilot, and am going up for my medical Board early next week. I'm feeling very fit, and, with a bit of luck, I think I'll pass the doctors. All I'm afraid of is that I've still got some of that gas in my system. If I pass I'll be sent down to Oxford to start my schooling, and if all goes well I should qualify as a pilot and get my Commission about Christmas time. If I fail I think I'll return to France as soon as I can; I'm very fed up with knocking around these camps and depots over here. Rothe is here and is going up to the next school, so, if I pass, he and I will be together."

Old Boys are asked to note the following corrections with regard to Colin Vernon McCulloch, who fell at Amiens, on April 11 of this year: his rank was that of Lieutenant, and his Battalion was the 2nd, and not the 17th.

We beg to thank Sir Robert Anderson for securing for us the loan of a splendid collection of war trophies, which were displayed to separate forms in the Gymnasium. The intimate relations which Mr. Short and Mr. Bates had enjoyed with many examples of such exhibits under other circumstances made them admirable showmen.

Eric A. Fallick, 35th Battalion, who was wounded at the end of July, and was on sick leave until the end of September, has returned to the Front.

Reg. R. Brown, M.C., officer commanding D14 Battery, Royal Horse Artillery, B.I.F., enlisted on the outbreak of war and left as a trooper with the 6th Light Horse, 1914. Served in Egypt and Gallipoli. Afterwards transferred to Royal Field Artillery, British Imperial Forces. A vacancy occurring in the Royal Horse Artillery, he was specially recommended for it by his Colonel, and transferred. Here he quickly rose from subaltern to Major. Left England at end of April on business furlough, owing to the death of his father. Taking more than one month's leave of absence he dropped his rank to Captain. He sailed from Australia on the 8th August to rejoin his regiment, and was reported killed in action, aged 27. He was 5 times mentioned in despatches, and won the Military Cross for gallantry, not yet reported in full. He owned Egelabra Station, Warren.

After leaving school, E. M. Sullivan, whose death from wounds on Oct. 12th in France, has been recorded by cable, went to New Zealand, then to Western Australia, and from there to San Francisco and Ontario. With a friend he joined the American Army, and went to the Mexican border. When that trouble was settled he went for a time to the Phillipines and thence to Japan. When he got his clearance papers, he joined the Seaforth Highlanders, and was transferred to the 21st Canadians, B.E.F. In a cable from the Canadian Government it is stated that he died of wounds on October 12 in the Field Ambulance. He was mentioned several times for gallant conduct. He won the Military Medal, but so far no particulars have been received.

On leaving school Sullivan had a Lieutenancy in the old 2nd Infantry Regiment, but resigned in order to serve in the South African war as a Sergeant. He served with the Imperial Draft Contingent, N.S.W. Bushmen, and was afterwards a member of the Coronation Contingent in 1902.

S. A. Witten was wounded at Villiers Bretonneux on Easter Saturday, March 30th, and died of wounds on April 1. He did not reach the hospital, but passed away in an Australian train, bound for the 11th Stationary Hospital, Rouen. He was reported wounded on April 16th by the Defence Department, but his death was not confirmed officially until June 22nd. His fellow soldiers state that he put up a good fight and was wounded about four times before the one that proved fatal. He was one of Lieutenant Pockley's men, who was himself killed on the same day, March 30, and being a Lewis gunner, and No. 1 on the gun, he was in a very dangerous position as the Battalion advanced 300 yards in the open without artillery protection. His rank was Lance-Corporal. The official report of his death sent to his father is as follows:

"With reference to the report of the regrettable loss of your son, the late No. 568 Lance Corporal S. A. Witten, 33rd Battalion, I am now in receipt of advice which shows that he died on the 1st April, 1918, of wounds (bomb wound abdomen and buttock) received in action and was admitted dead at No. 11 Stationary Hospital, Rouen, France. He was buried at St. Seve, Rouen, in France, the Rev. W. Evans officiating. These additional details are forwarded by direction, it being the policy of the Department to forward all information received in connection with deaths of members of the Australian Imperial Force."

Arthur Moseley writes on 5th Sept., 1918, in reply to one of the quarterly letters: "I am in hospital, and likely to remain here for some time. On June 24th, a Boche 5.9 shell walked into my room and burst. I stopped four pieces, and lost my right leg. I am cooked for the Army." I had been promoted to Colonel and was A.D.M.S., 4th War District, when I was cracked.

F. de V. Lamb writes from the Australian Red Cross Society, London, on which he is assistant Commissioner: Probably you have heard of what we are doing in Egypt, France and England—for the welfare of the sick and wounded members of the Australian Forces, and the appreciation that is frequently voiced leads us to feel that our efforts have not been in vain. The Australian prisoners of war are also our special concern and were it not for the food and clothing parcels which we send at regular intervals, they would be in a sorry plight. Those who come back from Germany have invariably told us that but for the parcels of food they would have been practically starved. When I tell you that these food parcels are despatched thrice fortnightly, and are valued at about ten shillings each; also that we have about 3000 prisoners in Germany, you will realise the heavy burden laid upon the Society. I wish you could see the huge stores we have, from which our goods are despatched. Many of our stocks are drawn from Australia, and probably it is difficult for you on the other side to realise how Australian jams, biscuits and other things are relished by the sick, wounded, and captured Australian. I have recently met Major Claude Tozer and Col. Arthur Moseley. The latter has recently had the misfortune to have his leg amputated, but when I saw him the other day I would have imagined him to be in the pink of condition, judging by his cheerfulness.

Dr. H. V. Hordern writes from Jerusalem on October 3rd, 1918:

After being in charge of our work at Port Said for three weeks, I was sent up here to take charge of the Palestine Front. I arrived the day our great offensive started, and as a consequence have been going night and day ever since. I personally supplied stores (bandages, swabs, diets, etc.) on the Jordan Valley front while the fighting was going on. I was so anxious to get my stuff up that I nearly presented the Turks with some Australian Red Cross material at Amman before our troops took the place. I have travelled many miles in ambulance and lorry convoys, these being the means by which I transport comforts, etc., and I have learned to have the greatest admiration for the drivers thereof. They work tremendously long hours and the dust along the roads is indescribable, and there is never a complaint, except a few solid cuss words when the rations give out. I was stationed at Es Sault the day after I tried to give the Turks my stores. I rode out on a borrowed horse (just took it) towards Amman, hoping to get in touch with the Anzac headquarters, which were supposed to be one and a half miles along the road. I found out afterwards that they had left during the night. After going for about two miles I was joined by three Bedouins, the leader of whom looked like something out of comic opera, two automatic revolvers, two daggers, two belts full of cartridges, and a rifle; he looked like a small arms factory. I was armed with the office key of my Jerusalem office, but not to be despised as it was quite a formidable looking weapon. As the leader rode up alongside of me, he threw his rifle up in the air several times, and each time it landed I noticed it pointed straight at my waistcoat (this, I understand, is a sign of friendship, only I didn't know it at the time); I thought he was going to shoot me in some fancy style. I really wanted to turn back, but felt it I did that would be the last of me. So I rode on with them for awhile; just turning round the bend of a hill I saw two horsemen, and decided to hurry up after them. I argued that if they were two Britishers I was alright, and if they were more Bedouins, well I might just as well be shot by five as three. The two men turned out to be two New Zealanders rejoining their units, and I was never more thankful to see any one in my life. Soon after I joined up with them the Bedouins rode off and I came back to Es Sault, having ridden about 14 miles instead of three. I waited on the road nearly six hours, trying to get transport either on to Amman or back to Jericho, but nothing doing. In the close vicinity were some 20 dead horses, and a few Turks, and from my experience I shouldn't recommend the spot as a health resort. The 39th Royal Fusiliers (a Jewish Regiment) made their headquarters at Es Sault during the afternoon, and I called on the C.O., hoping to get a wire through, but without any luck. He was just sending out small parties looking for arms, ammunition and some Germans, who were supposed to be hiding. I asked him if I could go with them. He made me O.C. of a squad of two men, only cautioned us to be well armed. I might remark the people of Es Sault turned on our troops the last time we attacked the place. I had my trusty door key, one man an unloaded rifle, and the other a piece of strong pipe. I knocked at the doors, and if they were not immediately opened, my friend with the unloaded rifle would say, "shall I open it in the old fashioned way, sir," and before I had time to reply would hurl himself at the door, and burst it open and then wanted to insist on going first, claiming he was the only armed man in the party, but I told him I was his officer (I am a Captain), and he would have to do as he was told. We did not find any Germans, or else didn't recognise them, but we got a maxim gun, and a lot of small stuff, and I thoroughly enjoyed the experience. In any of these jaunts I now carry a gun, but to be perfectly honest, I would feel happier and safer if it were unloaded. Have only seen one old boy up here and that was young Frank King, whom I found ill at the Anzac Receiving Station at Jericho.

C. E. Cameron writes, 19/7/18:

Horse Braddon is not very far behind us; in fact the battery he is in is covering my company section in the first line. I happened to be taking over from a company of the 34th Brigade.

some weeks ago, and when I arrived I was much surprised to find out I was taking over from Gilder. He seems quite well, and gave me a Torch-Bearer. Mine, however, came to hand a couple of days later. Gavin Cameron is round about here now. He is in the A.M.C. I also saw Tozer one day when I was in Abberville some time ago. He is in the Third Australian General Hospital. Faithful has just come over in the A.M.C., and has been attached to a Battalion in the Third Division. I happened to be prosecuting a few chaps on Court Martial a few days ago, and one of the witnesses was Phil Dixon, who is a Lance Corporal in the 17th Battalion in the Signalling section. Clunies Ross is also in that Battalion, a Sergeant; also Phelps and Doig, who is a prisoner of war just at present. Togo, better known as Kaepfel is back with his Battalion—the 18th. I saw him the other night, as we were going into the line. Oh, by the way, I notice that my Torch-Bearer is addressed "818 Lt. C. E. Cameron, B. Coy., 20th Brig." Well, when I got my Commission I dropped my number, and as we are changed about now and again, it is unnecessary to state a company. Would you mind adjusting that in the Torch-Bearer please.

Mr. Clunies Ross writes from Chisleton, Wilts., on the 25th June, 1918: My presence here is due to a little playful attention from the Hun. He caused me to inhale a little gas, and subtracted my voice, and the remainder was not much good as a Sergeant. Ten days in hospital, under a very casual medical officer, sent me back to the front. It had been in front of Ypres, and I found it near Armentieres. The gas had weakened my chest and to my surprise I found myself in Birmingham with bronchitis, just in time to miss the big Hun push, and am in a way sorry to be out of the doings, while my comrades are enduring hardships and dangers, but I really do not think I'd be much use, even yet. Just at present I am attending an anti-gas school for N.C.Os. at a place called Chisleton, where all the rest of the troops are Tommies of fifty different regiments.

Noel Eedy wrote from Reading in September, congratulating us on the success of the fete. He had a very interesting trip across the Pacific, up through the Panama canal, and then through the danger zone. At Tahiti he won the swimming championship of the boat, but thinks the other competitors must have been pretty dug. Lambert, Orr, Mocatta, Luscombe, Keirath and Carey, from the Artillery, and Mills of the A.F.C., were the Shore representatives on board. The Friday after we got here we had to go before an air board, and I promptly got kicked out to the Third L.G.H. at Wandsworth for an operation on my nose, the result of boxing tournaments. Blue Holcombe started it at School, and I only got the finishing touches at the 'Varsity. I was discharged from there a week ago, and had to report at Reading last Friday. Bill Hopkins and Eric Miller, who left about 1909, were both there, well on their way to recovery. I also met Rothe, who has transferred to the Flying Corps, Fallick, just convalescing, and Gregory, a Captain in the R.F.C., with six months' leave for Australia. At present I am at No. 1 school of Military Aeronautics at Reading, just starting on a six weeks' course. We shall not be flying for some time yet.

David McColl McCowan had had great news on September 26th, having just had orders to proceed with his regiment at a moment's notice, so then he was happy again. He was taking a draft to his Battalion; some draft, no less, pipers, Lewis gunners, and bombers. Since he had been invalided his Battalion had advanced about 70 miles, taking 45,000 prisoners and just about finishing Johnny. Their own casualties had been light and those of the Seaforths, too, but some unfortunate battalions on the Jordan had hit it up. Later news is to the effect that he has been offered a permanent position in the Black Watch with a view to adopting the army as his profession.

The description of the Richardson Window is as follows:—

The incident depicted is taken from the life of St. Andrew as described in the poems of Cynewulf.

St. Andrew was told by the Almighty to go to the land of the Mermedonian folk and release St. Matthew, who was held prisoner there. He was rebuked when he said it was impossible to do so in the three days allotted to him.

He was bidden to go to the sea shore and there embark in a ship he would find. This he did, and in the window is represented speaking to Christ, though he did not recognise Him, being in the garb of the captain of the ship. St. Andrew is asked to "pay toll, the appointed rate," but on confessing that he had not the means the "captain" consented to take him without payment. After many incidents the mission was fulfilled.

The "Black" window was referred to in Chapel Notes of the October Torch-Bearer.

The treatment of the subject was suggested by His Grace the Archbishop. St. Paul is represented as a kind of patron saint to the allied coloured peoples (St. Paul being apostle to the Gentiles), and is in the act of blessing a young armoured warrior before going into battle. "Fight the good fight" St. Paul's words are used as a text.

A brass tablet in memory of Captain Owen Dibbs has been placed in position since our last issue.

Cadet Notes.

DURING this term Major Harris has been conducting a musketry class for officers. The instruction has reached the cadets of the 1901 and 1902 quotas through the medium of the subalterns. This instruction has been facilitated by the use of tripods, of which there are now thirty, and sandbags.

Physical training now, by regulation, occupies a far more prominent position than heretofore. In addition to the daily physical drill, twenty minutes to half an hour of each parade is spent at physical exercises. The non-coms. mainly do the instructing, and they are fairly successful. Organized games form a part of the syllabus, and, so far, are the cause of much vigorous enjoyment.

The Leaving and Intermediate Certificate Examinations have interfered with parade during the last three weeks.

Rowing.

THE sheds have presented a busy appearance this term, as crews were busy training for the Trial Fours and "tubbing" was in vogue for some of the senior members of the Club. Saturday rows to Riverview have been well attended, and only two bad days have been recorded up to the time of writing. The progress made has been most gratifying, and some very useful work will now be possible at the Christmas Camp, thanks to the early start this year. It is much too early yet to venture upon seating the men in the various crews, and the final selection for seats will not take place until some time after Christmas camp which will develop the form at present shown to a great extent. Generally the form shown is excellent, with but few exceptions; but boys need to consider carefully the fact that the race is yet a long way off, and they must utilise the time available at getting their fundamental work correct, to facilitate the latter training work next term. Amongst those who rowed in the Trial Fours, Bell ii., Sinclair i., Hinder, Hixson, Reading, and Manning showed good form, while Curlewis, Archer, Hanuah, Small and Blackmore are promising.

The Trial Fours were rowed on Berry's Bay on November 6th, 7th and 11th, and provided some good contests. Five crews entered for the races, and of these, the winners, stroked by Hixson, showed out to great advantage from the point of form. Generally, the form shown was excellent, and the racing was not obtained at the expense of the rowing. The main feature was the taking up of the catch from the stretcher, which was very bright, and augurs well for the pace of future crews. The Committees are to be congratulated on the results of their work throughout the last three terms. The following are the results :—

1st Heat.—Hixson v. Vogan. Won by Hixson by 2 lengths in 4min. 55secs.

2nd Heat.—Bell v. Ward. Won by Ward by  $\frac{1}{2}$  length in 4min. 6secs.

Semi-Final.—Curlewis v. Hixson. Won by Hixson by 2 lengths in 4min. 28secs.

Final.—Hixson v. Ward. Won by Hixson by  $1\frac{1}{2}$  lengths in 3min. 25secs.

The winners are to be congratulated on the steadiness of their rowing and on their form. Bell's crew were unfortunately handicapped by the absence of their bow, Shannon, whose place was taken by Maclean II. The cox took this crew all over the bay, instead of picking a point and steering on it, a maxim to be observed by all coxwains.

Armistice Celebrations.

FRIDAY, November 8th, will be a day memorable in the annals of the School. In the early hours of the morning a cable from America announced that the Armistice had been signed by the German delegates to the conference. These joyful tidings were announced to the people of Sydney by the ringing of bells on land and the tooting of steam whistles on the water. The effect upon the School was electrical. Before the bell for Chapel rang the boys seized the big drum and any other noise-producing implement they could lay their hands on, and marched through the streets of North Sydney, ringing in on the way the girls from the Grammar School, Bay Road, and the nurses, doctors and patients from Graythwaite. The whole company then formed up on the School ground and an impromptu celebration was held, the Union Jack being saluted, the National Anthem sung, and a photograph of the assembly taken. Afterwards a service of thanksgiving was held in Chapel, which ended the School work for the day. Later in the day it was discovered that the announcement of the morning was premature. In fact it was not till the following Monday evening that the signing of the armistice was officially confirmed. The two following days were observed as holidays.

The School Concert and Dramatic Entertainment.

THE Annual School Entertainment took place in the Coliseum Hall, North Sydney, on Friday night, 25th October, when there was a bumper house and one duly appreciative of all the good things provided by those responsible for the programme.

With regard to the various musical items, Mr. R. G. H. Walmsley, the Musical Director, is to be congratulated on his choice of selections, and the rendering of those numbers for which he was personally responsible. His well-trained choir-boys, after the singing of the School song by the company, gave the unison song, "The School at War," by A. M. Goodhart. This was a pleasing number, and showed the master's patience in the work of training. G. F. Thompson's cello solo, "Andantino," by Lemare, would have been more welcome had this young performer's instrument been tuned, and the same remark applies to L. F. Barr in his violin solo, "Marche Militaire." Indeed it is a doubtful compliment to any audience to let loose undistinguished amateurs on stringed instruments which they have not yet learned to tune. The choir-boys also sang "The First Friend" and "The Camel's Hump." In Pinsuti's well-written "The Sea hath its Pearls," the boys were assisted by Major D. Smith's Octette Party. Mr. I. A. Rose was at the piano, while Mr. Walmsley conducted. The contrasted themes were well marked, and the conductor must have been pleased with the result. The Octette Party sang "Comrades in Arms," and "The Catastrophe," and were heartily applauded. For encores they sang the old, yet ever pleasing, "They Kissed, I saw them do it," and "A Chinese Serenade." They were a very happy family and their voices well-balanced. Their humorous work was excellent. In the song, "Drake Goes West," G. C. Turnbull proved himself the possessor of a baritone voice of good quality. He looked well and sang well. After an interval, during which Mr. Rose extemporised on the piano, the curtain was played up on the drama, "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing," which constituted the second part of the programme.

The dramatic part was a distinct surprise. An audience usually awaits the rising of the curtain upon an amateur effort with a vague anticipation of amusement at the crudities presented to them, and a sub-conscious dread of an hour of boredom. Such anticipations and fears were groundless. "A Sheep in Wolf's Clothing" is a bright little picture of an episode in the Monmouth affair; moreover it was brightly presented and fittingly staged, and the stage-manager, Mr. Pulling, is to be congratulated on a highly successful performance. Mrs. Hector Wilshire's interpretation of the part of Ann Carew left nothing to be desired. She is clearly at home upon the stage and has that air of repose that is so often lacking in amateurs. Mr. Wilshire as the villain was quite to the manner born, but we venture to think that he did not carry this quite far enough in his scenes with Anne; he showed to better advantage with Kester. Curlewis, as Kester, excellently camouflaged, made a good thing of the character of the slow-witted Somersetshire churl. It was a part to score with, and it is not too much to say that he did not miss many opportunities, and that he never let the audience down once. Mr. Pulling had the thankless task of portraying the hero; moreover when the hero is a husband instead of a lover, sad to say, some of the romance has gone. Mr. Pulling, however, made the best of it, and shewed appreciation of what was required of him, though he exercised restraint perhaps a little too much.

The less prominent parts were all well filled. Miss Dickie Pulling has only to be herself to be charming, and played the maid's part with spirit. Blackwood made a studied character part of Layland, the locksmith. This interlude was quite a little gem. It is clearly introduced into a tense situation as a touch of relieving comedy, and Blackwood's treatment of it just gave what was wanted without for one moment descending to the level of farce. Merewether, as Sybil, Carew's little daughter, made a charming little girl. The spontaneity of his leap into Jasper's arms was much appreciated by the audience, and he played his part without a trace of gaucherie. Miss Barnes gave her lines in the dignified style required of Dame Carew. Ormiston and Hyndes, as Kirke's lambs, looked ugly customers to tackle; their exit, achieved by a kind of antiquated goose-step, brought rounds of applause.

Boxing.

THE Boxing Tournament was held on Saturday nights, November 9th and 23rd. We take this opportunity of thanking Mr. W. Johnson and Mr. E. Weyland for refereeing and for the interest they took in the tournament. The boxing of the light and middleweights was good, but the heavyweights were rather poor.

Heath, who won on the first night, was unable to box on the second through illness, while Curlewis and Janes could not repeat their first wins owing to accidents.

The boys were divided into ten divisions, and the contests in many cases were very even. On the first night Heath won against Murray, and Doyle defeated Mander-Jones, but owing to Heath's illness Doyle and Murray met in the final for the School Championship. Murray won in a contest which showed neither skill, quickness, nor hard hitting. The results of the finals were as follows:—

10th Division.—Williamson beat Johnson.

9th Division.—Ross beat Shadforth II.

8th Division.—Barr beat Wood.

7th Division.—Trier beat Kirkby.
6th Division.—McCray I. beat Percy.

5th Division.—Jameson I. beat Tubb.

4th Division.—Dobbs beat Drummond.

3rd Division.—Litchfield I. beat Bell II.

2nd Division.—Rutherford beat Hutson I.

School Championship.—Murray III. beat Doyle II.

Prize Poem.

THE Poetry Competition for oversea competitors has been won by Slessor I. The subject was "Jerusalem Set Free." We quote the following extract from Victoria League Month Notes for September: "The prize is awarded to Kenneth Slessor.

. . . . We have much pleasure in printing the picturesque prize poem with its touches of Australian spirit, and congratulate Sydney on its successful first appearance in these competitions." The poem consists of two stanzas, which we append:—

"JERUSALEM SET FREE."

THE CRUSADERS RETREATING

1192 A.D.

The Crusaders rode home from the siege on the horse-beaten track

Where the Lion Heart led them to Glory, and now led them back.

Then they paused in retreat on the hills,
where below the long line

Shone Jerusalem, noiseless, and white as their half-forgot snow;

Where a bell sounded distant and shrill from a Saracen shrine . . .

Such a bell as they heard with light hearts when they struck the first blow.

There they prayed for a final and splendid Crusade, yet to be,

Which would come there with pomp, and with triumph would set the land free.

2

THE CRUSADERS ADVANCING

1917 A.D.

Not with echoing outburst of cannon, and splendid array,

Nor with solemn procession and pomp did her conquerors come;

For they flourished no banners, and stepped without martial display,

And their trumpeters sounded no fanfare,
nor loud was their drum.

But they straggled the streets, and they spoke in a casual drawl,

With no prayer, but a jest, on their lips as they surged through the Wall. . . .

Yet if Manhood, and Spirit and Deeds be the actual Test,

Who shall say that this Last, and most Splendid Crusade was not best?

Cricket.

THE team has not showed to advantage in competition-matches, and nerves seem to have played a large part in the defeats. Most of the boys are young, and will be here for two more seasons, which gives promise of a good team for the next two years. We should have the same bowlers and most of the promising bats long enough to gain experience and have confidence to play and win an uphill game. MacLachlan has improved a good deal in his batting, and is becoming more free and has developed a sound off-drive. His 71 against T.K.S. and 50 against St. Ignatius were made by clean, forceful cricket, and were the best innings made this term in competition matches. Manchee has failed with the bat, still keeping his tradition of being lbw. He is rather slow on the by-side and does not hit hard enough; he has a good stroke through slips, which gives him most of his runs, but is only now developing a drive. However, A. B. S. White's bat in the aggregate goes to him. Doyle and Cadwallader have been useful men in the team, and Edwards has been responsible for dismissing most of our opponents. Boazman gives promise, and at times has bowled and batted well. MacLachlan and Edwards have been picked for all Schools' 2nd XI., and we offer them our congratulations.

CHARACTERS OF THE XI.

Manchee (Capt.)—A fair captain on the field, but has failed to bind his team together; a good bat with most of his strokes behind the wicket. He is a slow scorer, chiefly owing to the fact that he does not drive hard enough, and makes most of his runs off the back cut, which is very clean. As Captain he is apt to bowl his bowlers too long, and does not make enough use of his slow bowlers. Bowls himself sometimes with fair success. Colours 1917-18.

MacLachlan.—A very much improved and sound bat, with strokes all round the wicket; has cultivated a sound on and off drive, which he times very well, and has a clean, hard back cut, which seldom fails to reach the fence; A very sound field in slips, and good length slow bowler, who obtains a lot of work with a new ball. Colours 1918. All School Second XI, 1918.

Edwards.—As the opening bowler has bowled with considerable success, and has been of very great assistance to the team; bowls a medium to fast ball swinging both ways and rarely fails to make a breach in an opposing team. A slow, but improving bat, picks his ball well to hit, and has a hard straight drive; a very useful man when stonewalling is needed. Colours 1918; All Schools XI, 1918.

Doyle.—A slow, but solid bat, who never loses his head at critical stages of the game; has stood well for the team on many occasions. A good field at point. Colours, 1918.

Bevan.—A very fair, hard-hitting bat, with strong off and straight drives, and a developing cut; scores quickly off fast bowling, but rather uncertain when playing a slow bowler; is slow to move back, rather a clumsy field, but has improved; should develop into a good bat with more experience. Colours, 1918.

Cleghorn.—A slow and steady bat, who is fairly consistent, and generally makes runs when the rest of the team fails; has not many strokes, and is very slow on his feet; a good out-field. Colours, 1918.

Boazman.—A vastly improved bat who has a fair number of strokes behind the wicket, and an off drive which is gaining in strength; a bowler of great promise; who swings both ways and nips sharply, and keeps a good length; a fair field. He should do well and be a tower of strength to the team, both with the bat and ball when he has had more experience.

Cadwallader.—A slow bowler who could have been used more; bowls leg breaks and keeps a fair length; is rather hampered by not having a 'bosie. His batting has improved a good deal, and in spite of the fact that he is rather stiff, is one of the safest and steadyest bats in the team; has a hard off drive, and clean cut between slips and point; will do much better when he uses his feet more; rather a weak field.

Hardy.—Change bowler who develops considerable pace and often bowls with fair success. Left-hand bat who hits hard, and has a much improved defence. Scores fast mostly on straight, off and on drives, but loses a lot of runs by not having a cut, a stroke which he is just mastering. A very good field and catch.

Shaw, as wicket-keep is slow and rather uncertain; a disappointing bat, who suffers from nervousness when runs are needed.

Bucknell ii.—An improving bat with a fair number of strokes, the best of which are an off drive and cut; is rather slow to get going and is a little awkward; a fair field; should become a very useful member of the team.

The following are the cricket awards for the season 1918:

Colours.	1st Eleven.	Blazers.
Cox	Shaw	Stephen
Moses	Boazman	Prell
Laurie	Cadwallader	Micklin.
Manchee	Bucknell ii.	Bucknell i.
MacLachlan	Hardy	Harris
Edwards	Roberts.	McIntosh
Doyle		D'Ombraim
Bevan		Barr
Clifton		Bennett
		Dabelle

Cox, Moses and Laurie were awarded their colours earlier in the year.

COMPETITION MATCHES.

The School v. The King's School.

Played at Parramatta on October 26, and lost on the first innings by 76 runs. Manchee won the toss and took MacLachlan in on a perfect wicket. As in other matches the first few made all the runs, and with three down for 108 there was promise of a fair innings. MacLachlan was run out for 71, made by good forcing cricket, with clean off drives and late cuts. After Boazman was out for 14; the wickets fell in quick succession, and the innings closed for 139, seven wickets adding only 31 runs. Much the same sort of innings was played by King's; Bettington 122 and Forsayth 32, batted well, the former driving very hard and cleanly. The other eight made 46 runs between them. Edwards was rather out of form with the ball, and was rather lucky to get Bettington on a short pitched one. MacLachlan bowled well for 3 for 37, and Cadwallader was useful with 2 for 37. Scores:

The School v. St. Ignatius College.

Played at Riverview on November 2, and won on the 1st innings by 68 runs. Riverview won the toss and went in on a dry, but tricky wicket. Edwards, as usually happened, broke up the opening bats, and bowled well with 4 for 41. Manchee, 3 for 10, and Boazman 2 for 14, did considerable damage. For Riverview, Morrissey and Bryant batted well for 19 and 16, and Oxenham hit hard for 36. For the School

Maclachlan again made runs, scoring 50 by clean, and forceful cricket; Cadwallader batted steadily for 15, and Edwards scored a very useful 33, made by interesting cricket, with hard straight and off drives. The innings closed for 183. Scores:—

The School v. Sydney High School.

Played on No. 2 oval, and lost by 5 runs. High School won the toss and batted first, compiling 139 on a wicket which crumbled. Hyde and Smith played good cricket for 45 and 28. For the School Edwards was the most successful bowler, securing 5 for 38. He kept a fair length and used his head. The opening of the School's innings was very bright. Manchee and Maclachlan scored 21 runs in five minutes. The pair were soon separated, however, when Maclachlan, attempting to pull a loose ball from Webb, mis-hit it, and was caught for 10, and shortly afterwards Manchee was out to a very good catch in the slips for 22. Doyle 36, and Cleghorn 15, played steady cricket, and Boazman batted freely for 25. The fourth wicket fell for 118 and the game looked safe, but panic seemed to possess the rest of the team and the innings closed for 134. Doyle's innings of 36 was a useful, but slow one. As in the Scots' match he made a good effort to hold the team together, and win, but after Boazman was out he had no support. Scores:

The School v. the Scots' College.

Played on No. 2 Oval on November 30, and won on the first innings by 26 runs. Scots won the toss and batted on a slow but good wicket. Bruce batted well for 23, and Black for 38, while Pilcher hit hard, scoring 32. For the School Edwards bowled slower than usual, and gained a lot of work, swinging from both the leg and the off. His bowling was accurate, and he kept a good length, gaining 4 for 28. The wicket was slow for Maclachlan, who got 2 for 11, although his bowling was not up to form. Cadwallader, 2 for 19, also bowled well. Scots' innings closed for 116, after a loss of the first 6 wickets for 36 runs. Manchee and Cadwallader opened for the School, and by lunch time we were no wickets down for 12. Shortly after resuming Cadwallader was out for 2 and Maclachlan failed to score. Manchee played neat cricket for 17, and Hardy's 18 and Bevan's 17 were good innings. The most useful innings of the day was Doyle's 39, gained by very slow, but steady cricket at a time when the game hung in the balance. Edwards' 21 not out, played a faultless innings, and with Doyle passed the Scots' total. Scores.:

SECOND XI.

The team is a very young one, and has several boys of promise. Manchee iv., who has batted consistently, should become a useful man, and Barr, who latterly has bowled very well, breaking both ways, should develop into a very good slow bowler. Bucknell, Harris and McIntosh as bats, D'Ombraïn and Prell, as bowlers, and Bennett, as wicket-keep, show considerable promise. The bat for the aggregate number of runs in competition matches goes to Bucknell i.
